SUNYANI TECHNICAL UNIVERSITY PROFILE

The history of the University is very telling from its humbling beginnings to date as it continues to define a niche for itself in education and training of critical human resources for the development of the country. The University started as Sunyani Technical Institute (SUTECH) in 1967 to offer technical and vocational education and training to Middle School Leavers, and later on, to Junior Secondary School graduates in hands-on Craft/Intermediate Block-Laying and Concreting, Carpentry and Joinery, Furniture Craft as well as Painting and Decoration programmes.

Other programmes offered included Electrical Installation, Motor Vehicle Mechanics, Mechanical Engineering Craft Practice, Welding and Fabrication, Cookery for the catering and hospitality industry and Business Studies with options in Accounting and Secretarial management. It is interesting to note that, some of these courses are still being offered by the University to different targeted groups through the Council for Technical and Vocational Education and Training (COTVET).

In 1997, Sunyani Technical Institute was upgraded to Sunyani Polytechnic (SPOLY) in line with government policy to stress on Technical/Vocational Education and Training (TVET) at the tertiary level. The enabling law, the Polytechnics Act 745 empowered the institution to offer tertiary education programmes, principally, Higher National Diploma (HND) in areas in response to national human resource needs at the tertiary level. In addition, non-tertiary courses which were being offered in the previous era continued to run as certificated skilled-based courses to serve industry and also feed the HND programmes. Within this period of Polytechnic status, the first corporate strategic plan was formulated to guide the growth and management of the institution from 2005-2015. Current status In 2016, Sunyani Polytechnic was converted to Sunyani Technical University (STU) and given a new mandate through the coming into force of the Technical Universities Act 2016 (Act 922 as amended).

The TUs Act mandates the University to provide higher education and award degrees, diplomas and other certificates in Engineering, Science, and Technology-based disciplines as well as Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET), Applied Arts and related disciplines. The conversion to Technical University has necessitated reforms in internal governance structures and realignment of programmes and departments, increased investment in staff capacity development and infrastructures as well as the formulation and implementation of the second corporate strategic plan for 2015-2020, which is currently being replaced by a new strategic plan for 2020 –2025.

DIRECTION OF THE UNIVERSITY

From its historical beginnings to the present, the University has experienced productive growth, in terms of facilities and student population. Currently, Sunyani Technical University offers four-year Bachelor of Technology Degree Programmes, Higher National Diploma (HND) and Non-Tertiary Programmes in Engineering, Science and Technology, TVET, and Applied Arts disciplines. There are plans to obtain the requisite accreditation for the running of Master of Technology and Doctor of Technology programmes in the near future.

WELCOME MESSAGE FROM THE VICE-CHANCELLOR

On behalf of the Management, staff, and the entire Sunyani Technical University (STU) community, I warmly welcome you all, our cherished freshmen and women, to STU and to the city of Sunyani. We are extremely privileged to have you with us and we congratulate you and your parents on the decision to come to this university to pursue your tertiary education ambitions. I have no reservation whatsoever that you have made right, this important decision to study at STU.

STU has an undeniable history of excellence in technical and professional education dating back several decades into the era of Sunyani Technical Institute in 1967 through to Sunyani Polytechnic in 1997. This is the foundation upon which we continue to inspire, build and grow as a university beginning from 2016 when the institution was converted to a Technical University. With a new status and mandate, the university is pursuing initiatives with the support of government, industry, the staff unions, the private sector and other stakeholders to improve the human resource capacity, infrastructure, industrial training and attachment, teaching, learning and research, and administrative services to deliver on its mandate.

The initiatives are meant to create an experiential teaching, learning and research environment that unearth your talents, develop your knowledge and equip you with skills critical to your personal and professional growth, for national development. So, I invite you, our freshmen and women, to embed yourselves fully into the university in order to benefit from the opportunities that we offer to our students.

You must apply yourselves and resources to your primary objective of acquiring knowledge and skills in order to meet the standards of academic performance to fulfill your ambitions. Your continuous status as junior members of this university is only guaranteed by meeting the requirements of academic work and adhering to the rules and regulations of the university. In this regard, you must thoroughly read and imbibe the students' handbook and apply yourselves to it. You must be disciplined in managing your time and activities in order not to be overwhelmed by unproductive activities which could lead to burnout and poor performance.

I will also want to remind you that you are ambassadors of the university. Your attitude and behaviour reflect upon the image and reputation of the university, either negatively or positively. Therefore, I implore you to desist from any act that will bring the name of the university into disrepute. You must be sensitive to the culture and values of your new environment and act appropriately. Avoid unhealthy lifestyles, inappropriate behaviours and absurd relationships.

The COVID-19 pandemic is also here with us. As you have already seen here on campus, adequate provisions have been made for personal protective equipment (PPE) including hand sanitizers, nose masks and handwashing stations with active support of government. I appeal to you to observe all the COVID protocols put in place to protect yourselves and others from the spread of the virus. You must be an avid campaigner on campus and in your halls and hostels by demonstrating adherence to the protocols, and also remind your course and roommates to do same whenever they relax their guard.

I wish to assure you that as management of the University, we will do all that we can to support and encourage you to successfully study and complete your programmes of study.

We will protect, respect and defend your rights and privileges as junior members, and accord you with the needed opportunities to develop and flourish to the best of your abilities.

Once again, congratulations on your admission and matriculation into junior membership of STU.

God bless our efforts and make STU great and excellent.

Ing. Prof. Kwadwo Adinkrah-Appiah
Vice-Chancellor
